George was taken to the jail, and the negroes being informed of that expressed themselves satisfied and soon dispersed. Hundreds of ramors, however, prevailed, and a strong and well organized force was kept under arms all day and all night.

A committee of the old citizen negroes met a committee of tilzens at the courthouse, to devise means to put down the threatened disturbance. The citizens were Messrs, Shepherd, House, Eaker, Longcope and Shenra. There is no indication this morning of a renewal of the riot, and all is apparently quiet. If the negroes had persisted in their violence, hundreds of them would have been slain, and the mean white men who instigate linem would have gotten their hides full onto lead.

From the New Orleans Picuyune, June 19th. From the New Orwans (reduyine, June 1801.)
There is a very humorous jury sitting just now in the Fifth District Court. They seem tetermined to make the most of their unsleasant position too; and the proceedings would be farcical were it not for the disgust which every man of Intelligence, whatever nature or color, must feel on seeing weighty questions of law and justice submitted to the gnorant judgment of revently enfranchised shaves.

A number of New York newspaper correspondents accompanied General Grant on his progress to and from West Point, and narrowly watched his every unovement. The fribune man saw a startling exhibition of benevolence. He says that "on his way down is the river, General Grant lighted a cigar, and sait down near the guards. The string band on board played national airs white he sat reading and snoking. The newspaper boy was selling badges of the General, and suddenly coming up to the smoker, said: "Grant badges, 55 cents apiece; good likenesses, ouly twenty-live cents." Grant put his hand into his pocket, and, taking out a fifty-cent note, handed it to the boy, took the badge, and said: "Never mind the change," and resumed his cigar." The representative of the Herald furnishes another aneedote, which displays the depth of thought of the Radical candidate: "A prominent politician resolved to every word he said to his friends, hoping that politics might never so slightly enter into their conversation. Well, he sat by Grant all the way up, but it appears that the General did not speak a word to his companions on any subject whatever, until, ha a field bordering the shore the sight of an old, sickly horse lenning his weary head against the wooden bars, seemed to attract his attention. Turning to one of his friends, he pointed in the direction of the field, and said, in his usual injustices that the General did rection of the field, and said, in his usual injustices which is companions of any subject whatever, until, in a field bordering the shore the sight of an old, sickly horse lenning his weary head against the wooden bars, seemed to attract his attention. Turning to one of his friends, he pointed in the direction of the field, and said, in his usual injustices and then resumed his clear."

On yesterday morning (Sunday), about 7 Celock, sudden and rapid firing was heard near the markethouse, and soon after the fire lells rung alarms, and hundreds of persons ushed pell-mell to the scene. Here is the hisory of the riot so far as I can gather: Geo. Cobe, a Conservative negro, some months sembled at the markethouse, and, it is said, instigated by white men, complained that George was not put in the jah. They accessed Marshal Lord, and demanded to know why he was not highl, and intimated a design to take him out of the custody of the officers and hang him. Mr. Lord very properly to his freeze and hang him. Mr. Lord very properly to his freeze and him and began using vidence, Mr. Lord defending himself with his stick. In the row Lord was shot in the teack of the head, and others and others came forward to his rescue. Two negroes were then shot, one of whom has since died, and the whole populace were wrought up to a high state of exchenent.

The negroes dispersed, rung the bell of their church, and sent couriers all over the outskirts of the city and in the country to bring in recruits. The city bell also sounded the alarm, and the clitzons flocked in large numbers to the market square. In the mean-time five or six hundred negroes had coffected at their church, and avowed that they would market down town and either put George in questions of law and justice submitted to the ignorant judgment of revently enfranchised shaves.

Yesterday there was an important case before the court in which thousands of dollars are involved. The jury is composed of nearly, if not quite, one-half tegroes, two or three of whom are intensely black and thoroughly ignorant, and whose efforts to appear at ease and to understand the abstruse questions propounded from time to the witnesses by the lawyers, were paintfully ludierous. Cite Hilbernian, who has the misfortune to be on the jury, objected very strenuously at first to taking a seaf with the suble members, but was thaily compelled to submit. The court was delayed yesterday for some minutes wniting the advent of this jovial son of Erln. He finally made his appearance, however, and when greeted by the other members of the jury with the exclamation, "Here at hist, hey?" regided, "Yes, here at last, and perfectly sober, I'm sorry to say."

While the testimony was being taken Pat put in his our quite often, with questions that showed he had a great desire to post himself as to the merits of the case.

The evidence being concluded he politely requested the lawyers to permit him to get a drink of water. They at first complied, but seeing that the judge was absent requested that to walt his return, one of the lawyers remarking to him that as he expected to get a verdict in the case he desired that everything should be conducted with proper formally."

"bo you want a verdict?" says Pat. "Yes," replied the lawyer, "Are you prepared to pay for it?" "Certainly," was the langhing response, "Then send men bottle of champagneright now." This caused a burst of merriment, when one of his fellow-jurymen remarked that one bottle would not go round. German Immigrants.

From the Boston Journal, Jane 11.

From the lasteo Journal, June II.
Letters from Germany represent that the immigration from that country to the United States, this year, will be larger than over before, and his estimated that the German population moor States and Territodes will be mercased some 250,000 by this year's arrivals from German ports. The character of the persons who me this year leaving Germany to seek American homes, shows a great improvement over the immigrants that have been received in former years. As a clas,

The river is gradually falling here, but not so rapidly as we supposed it would. I'p to this time it has receded 8 linehes since our last report; at the head of the falls, the marks at dusk last evening showing about 7 feet in the Indiana chule, 6 feet over the rocks, and 9 feet in the cannt. The head of the rise was so near us that the decline must be rapid, and we may expect it to double the rate of declination. In the next 12 or 21 hours. The weather was unseasonably cool during
